

Linda Norgrove Memorial Lecture

Linda Norgrove completed a PhD at the Institute for Development Policy and Management between 1999 and 2003 and was well-known for her academic work and her support for friends and colleagues.

At the time of her death on 9 October 2010 Linda was working on local development schemes in a remote, rural area in East Afghanistan.

Conservation and Development: Still a Dialogue of the Deaf?

Professor Bill Adams

Moran Professor of Conservation and Development, and Fellow of Downing College, University of Cambridge

Thursday 20 October 2011

3.30 to 5.00pm – lecture

5.00 to 6.00pm – drinks reception

Venue: Room G.107,
Alan Turing Building
(No. 46 on the campus map)

Bill Adams is Professor of Conservation and Development in the Department of Geography at the University of Cambridge. He works on relations between society and nature, particularly relating to the conservation of wildlife. He is interested in the evolution of ideas in conservation and resource development, and what happens when they are applied.

Free admission – everyone welcome